Impact Report FAQ for Grant Recipients

The TD Ready Commitment’s goals for an inclusive and sustainable tomorrow come to life using four interconnected drivers of change. Within these four drivers are 10 outcome-driven focus areas where TD targets its efforts to positively impact our colleagues, customers and community.

To determine our progress toward our goals, we collect standardized data from our community partners regarding the social and environmental impact of our philanthropic community investments. Community partners will receive direct guidance on reporting timelines and instructions on accessing the report via email.

My organization received funding from TD. How do I complete our impact report?

A notification will automatically be sent to your organization within 9 months of your grant date. You’ll receive this notification via email to whichever person you indicated as the primary contact in your initial application. The email invitation will provide a link to log into TD’s grant portal—the TD Ready Commitment Network—where you can complete the report.

If you haven’t set up a login for TD’s grant portal, you’ll receive a prompt to create a password for that portal in a separate email. If the person who was listed as the primary contact on your application is no longer with your organization or is unavailable to complete the report this year, please update this information in the TD Ready Commitment Network. If you're unable to access the TD Ready Commitment Network, please email us at us-charitablegiving@td.com.

What is the reporting period for this impact report?

The e-mail you receive will specify your organization's grant date, and this will be the starting point to report all activities that took place from the grant date and for the 9 months following.

For example:

- If your grant date says November 2018, please report on all activities completed from November 2018 through August 2019.
- If your grant date says April 2019, please report on all activities completed from April 2019 through January 2020.

What should I include in the impact report?

You should include information on activities supported by TD funding for the 9 months following your grant date. Please do not include data on any activities that took place outside of this timeframe.

Is there a deadline for completing the impact report?

Yes, the notification email will have the due date for the impact report in the subject line. The due date will also be available in the TD Ready Commitment Network.

If you'll be unable to meet this deadline, please contact your Senior Regional Giving Manager to notify them. Please note that if you do not complete an impact report for your activities (without extenuating circumstances—see below), it may affect decisions on future grant applications from your organization.

We received more than one grant from TD this year. Should we include all our impact data in one report?

No—if you received funding from TD for separate initiatives this year, you should receive separate impact reports to complete. They'll be delivered to the email address of the primary contact listed on the application. So, if you listed the same person for multiple initiatives, they'll receive multiple invitations to complete an impact report. You'll be able to discern which report is for which initiative based on the 'project title' and the related request information on the invitation emails and TD's granting portal.

We received a notice to complete an impact report for funding we received this year, but our activities haven't started yet, so we have nothing to report. What should we do?

Please contact your Senior Regional Giving Manager at TD and notify them. Your report will be marked 'no activities to report' for this year, and you'll be issued a report to complete next year for these activities.

You will not be penalized in any way for not completing this year's report under these circumstances.

If our program is ongoing and we have not exhausted our TD funding, do we still need to submit a report?

Yes, please report on activity completed during the 9-month period following your grant date, regardless of if there are still TD funds to exhaust for this program. Please note within your impact report narrative if there are leftover funds and a timeline for use of these funds.

The COVID-19 pandemic has forced us to change/defer/cancel the activities that we originally planned when we got the grant from TD. Should we still complete the impact report?

If you have the capacity to complete the report this year, yes, we would like to hear from you. Given the pandemic, many of TD's community partners have had to adjust, delay, defer or pivot their activities, and it's important for TD to learn about how this affected your organization and your beneficiaries.

If you've already discussed the adjustments to your activities with your primary contact at TD, then you should see two additional questions on the report so that you can share how you used TD funding to specifically address the impact of the pandemic. These questions should not add undue burden to the task of completing the report and will help TD learn how we can continue to provide flexible support to organizations and communities at this difficult time.

However, we're also aware that many partner organizations will be struggling with greatly diminished capacity and emergency situations, which may preclude your ability to complete the report. If your organization is facing these kinds of circumstances, please let TD know via your primary contact, and we can defer your reporting to a later date—in no way will your organization be penalized for this.
